

To our valued community,

We here at BARN are keeping a careful eye on updates regarding COVID-19, the new coronavirus. We choose to remain open and to increase our vigilance towards cleanliness.

As long as there are monitors who are comfortable with being here, our open studios will remain open. On the other hand, any student who feels unsafe or unwell may cancel enrollment in a class, any time, with full refund, at least through April. (Our usual policy is no refunds if a student withdraws within 4 days of a class.)

We have canceled our Spring Sampler event since its purpose is to invite many people of all ages to try hands-on experiences in studios. Look for its return on our calendar in March of 2021.

Some of our teachers who are traveling from afar - or are counted among higher risk populations - are canceling classes. We are communicating with students in those classes as soon as we know, and will be providing refunds or credits, as requested. For a very few classes, we can offer alternatives such as electronic classes, but this is rare since most of our classes are hands-on experiential.

We hope that BARN will remain a place to step away from the world's worries and connect with our caring and creative community.
